

It's a bad idea to approve the digital television copyright protection act. This is the first step in a severe limitation of consumer rights, yet the signals being "protected" are (from a business perspective) only slightly clearer than the traditional signals. HDTV doesn't compromise the traditional broadcast business model to the point where it's necessary to remove traditional rights held by consumers. Don't approve it.